USS West Virginia Battleship & the Pilot Wheel Connection to St. Albans, WV

USS West Virginia Battleship was launched on 17 November 1921. On Sunday, December 7 1941, West Virginia was struck while at Peal Harbor, Hawaii, by seven Japanese aerial torpedoes, sending her to rest on the bottom of the harbor. 106 sailers died on board during the attack, including it's captain.

With a patch over the damaged area of her hull, the battleship was pumped out and ultimately refloated on 17 May 1942. During the ensuing repairs, workers located 66 bodies of West Virginia sailors who had been trapped below when the ship sank. The WestVirginia sailed again on 14 September 1944 after an extensive overhaul.

This is the time the pilot wheel, now on display at Hilawn Swim Club was removed, along with an identical one now on display at the new WV State Museum. The Hilawn wheel was acquired by Senator Jennings Randolph in 1958 at the request of it's first president when the pool opened, Mr. Rus Davidison and has been on display here since. (A volunteer is needed to remove the red paint and restore the 89 year old wheel to it's beautiful finish).

West Virginia, "Wee Vee", participated in the invasion of the Philippine Islands in 1944, The West Virginia had also sank or heavily damaged several approaching Japanese ships. The ship did the same at the battles of Iwo Jima and Okinawa in 1945. A Japanese plane crash-dived into West Virginia. Four men were killed by the blast. On August 10, Japan surrendered. West Virginia sailed for Tokyo Bay and was thus present at the time of the formal surrender on September 2, 1945.

She sailed to Washington State in January 1946 and commenced inactivation and was then decommissioned in January 1947 and placed in reserve. West Virginia earned five battle stars for World War II service. The USS West Virginia was eventually sold for scrap in August 1959.

John Peter Salley

John Peter Salley (or Salling) was among five Virginia explorers who departed March 16, 1742, from a few miles east of Natural Bridge, on a journey to the Mississippi River. The Governor's Council of Virginia had granted a commission for this trip to John Howard for the purpose of reinforcing British claims in the west. The promised reward of 10,000 acres of land for a successful expedition encouraged Howard's son, Josiah, and Salley, John Poteet, and Charles Sinclair to accompany the elder Howard on the trip. At New River, they constructed a boat covered with buffalo hides and embarked as the first Englishmen to explore that region. They followed the New until the river became too dangerous to navigate, leaving at a major falls and traveling overland to the Coal River, probably at the headwaters at Marsh Fork, then followed the Great Kanawha and Ohio Rivers, and reached the Mississippi on June 7, 1742. The party descended the Mississippi to just below the mouth of the Arkansas River, where, on July 2, they were captured by a large company of Indians, blacks, and Frenchmen. Transported as captives to New Orleans, they were imprisoned as spies.

After two years' confinement, Salley escaped on October 25, 1744, eventually returning by a southern route to his home in Augusta County, Virginia, in May 1745. Salley's account provided Virginians with their first information about previously unknown regions, including present West Virginia, and he is credited with the discovery of coal on Coal River. In December 1744, Howard was being transported to France when the English intercepted the ship. He is known to have reported his adventures after landing in London, but his account has not survived.

Gabriel Arthur

Frontiersman Gabriel Arthur is believed to have been the first white person to see the Kanawha Valley, having visited the area with a band of Indians in 1674. Little is known of Arthur personally, other than he was a young man, possibly 19, when his great adventure began, and probably of English birth. He traveled with James Needham and others sent out by Abraham Wood from Fort Henry (present Petersburg, Virginia) to explore western lands. An Indian guide killed Needham, but Arthur traveled widely with the natives, possibly as their captive, though he is said to have married an Indian woman. He ventured as far south as Spanish West Florida (present Alabama) and apparently participated in raiding the Shawnee in the Ohio Valley. Eventually he reached present West Virginia, following the Big Coal River to its mouth at the Kanawha River. Though in hostile Shawnee territory, the southern Indians with whom Arthur traveled were welcomed by local Moneton Indians, themselves perhaps a Shawnee remnant. Their large village was located at present St. Albans at the mouth of Big Coal River. Arthur's journey, which began in May 1673, ended with his return to Fort Henry with several Indians and a load of furs in June 1674.

St. Albans Archeological Site

The St. Albans site, placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1974, contained some of the most important archeological deposits yet discovered in the eastern United States. Identified in 1963 by Samuel D. Kessell, the site was recognized when artifacts were found on the eroded bank of the Kanawha River at St. Albans. Exploratory investigations indicated cultural deposits extended to a depth of perhaps 35 feet below the surface. The West Virginia Geological and Economic Survey conducted extensive excavations in 1964-66, and again in 1968. Archeologists from Marshall University, Cultural Resource Analysts, Inc., and colleges in Michigan and North Carolina conducted smaller-scale excavations in the 1990's.

The importance of the site was based on a sequence of stratified Archaic occupation periods, recognized primarily by projectile points, knives, scrapers, drills, and adzes made of flint, and larger implements including hammer stones and anvils made from river cobbles. Hearths and other types of thermal features were possibly used for processing food. The density and distribution of remains suggest the occupations represent seasonal camps of highly mobile hunter-gatherer bands.

Because the stratified occupations contained hearths with charcoal, it was possible to date them and their associated artifacts. Thus, for the first time archeologists were able to establish relatively precise ages for the Charleston Corner Notched, St. Albans Side Notched, and Kanawha Stemmed projectile point types. The radiocarbon dates available for the site indicates a period of Early Archaic occupation spanning from approximately 8000 to 6000 B.C.. Earlier occupations might be present in more deeply buried deposits.

100 Years Ago (1910)

Halley's Comet Seen in Country Also

From his home on Black Hawk Mountain about three miles east of the Kanawha and Michigan Railway, George Parcell saw Halley's comet at an early hour this morning. Mr. Parcell stated that he was up about 4 o'clock and saw the comet and that it was visible until daylight. At one time the brilliant Venus, the moon and the comet were visible. Mr. Parcell is a laborer working for John F. Blessing, but telephoned to The Mail office the confirmation of the report that the comet was now in sight.

With the identification of the comet by its tail, it would appear that Charleston people at last have the opportunity so long desired to see this unusual celestial visitor, at least from the hilltops around Charleston, should the mornings prove clear, of which there now seems to be a proposal for the next few days at least.

The Charleston Mail, Thursday, May 5, 1910

Mrs. L. P. (Elizabeth) Harvey, of St. Albans, recalls seeing Halley's comet on its previous pass as she returned home from Pittsburgh via steamboat. She was fourteen at the time.

(Ed: Elizabeth Harvey was one of our first Historical Society members and an officer)

The local sighting of Halley's comet was front news on May 5 & 6, 1910. Larger headlines about the same time reported the deaths of Samuel Clemens (Mark Train) on April 21 and Britain's King Edward VII on May 7, 1910.

"Billy Richardson's Last Ride"

A popular train song commemorates the death of a locomotive engineer in the Kanawha Valley. Billy Richardson, an engineer on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad from 1878 to 1910, was known to run fast and on time. People along the C&O recalled that Richardson would wave and whistle as his train sped by, his long beard flying in the wind. The affable engineer developed a habit of leaning far out of the right cab window.

Richardson's usual run was from Hinton to Huntington and back, On December 14, 1910, he was running west toward Huntington, passing through Scary, near St. Albans. Richardson blew the whistle and stuck his head out the window to look back. The mail crane, a track-side device from which trains snatched mail bags on the fly, hit Billy Richardson in the head, pounding his left temple. The fireman, Cecil Lively, brought the train into Huntington on time. Richardson died shortly after reaching the hospital there.

Not until 1926 was the engineer memorialized in song. N&W engineer Cleburne Meeks, who as a boy in Fayette County stood in his backyard every other day to wave at Billy Richardson, wrote the song lyrics to "Billy Richardson's Last Ride." Carson J. Robinson wrote the tune in 1926, and Vernon Dalhart recorded the song for seven different record companies.

Jim McGee, Louisville, Kentucky "The West Virginia Encyclopedia", printed by the West Virginia Humanities Council, 2006

Through the West Virginia mountains came the early mail, Old Number Three was westbound, the fastest on the rail; She pulled right into Hinton, a junction on the line, With a Baldwin Mountain engine they made the run on time.

Billy Richardson at Hinton was called to take the run, To pull the fastest mail-train from there to Huntington; His fireman he reported for duty on the line, Then reading their train orders left Hinton right on time.

Then pulling down New River came westbound No. Three, By Thurmond, then by Cotton Hill, no danger could he see; His head then struck a mail-crane while pullin' down the line, He'll never pull his train again to Huntington on time.
